

Sometimes it's NO

Study Verse: Testimonial

My Thoughts: Today I want to share an experience that my Husband and I share with God. I know it may not be biblical or scriptural, but it is a true experience that I hope will help you at some time as you grow in your relationship with God, Jesus and the Holy Spirit.

I will identify my husband and I as “We”..

We had been serving in a church as ministers, finding our way as we sought God in our choices of life, ministry, and our relationship with the Lord. We were not fanatics that played off in left field in the empty ball field if you get my meaning....We were really serious in our obedience to what God needed us to do, say, and be as examples before our Son and the children we were teaching.

This next part is not a big supernatural event that occurred, an everyday nothing day that everyone has.

It was a Friday Date Night as a couple. A time we shared each week to keep our relationship well and in tune. We didn't pray LORD WHERE SHOULD WE GO??? LORD TELL US WHAT YOU WANT US TO DO. Come on.. It was just an night out. BUT... We chose a restaurant, arrived, walked up to the door to enter, and both of us, at the same time, reaching to open the door, heard NO! We looked at each other with shock, as we asked, Did you hear that? The tone of the voice we heard was a Fatherly disapproval tone.. You know, kind of like that you better not with the use of your full name scolding... We did not hesitate, we turned and left. To this very day, we have no idea the WHY...

Do not really care, curious maybe, it's on my ask the Lord list when I get to heaven. (wink, wink)

Here is the lesson for today, as you draw closer to God, as your relationship strengthens with the Holy Spirit Your hearing is more sensitive, your understanding is more clear, your obedience is more trusting. You know that you know and nothing can cause you to question what God says to you. Sometimes He will say NO! Just trust and walk away. He protects us with NO, even when we REALY want to hear Yes. Trust His NO! Give thanks, He has you....

Until next time, May God bless, heal, protect and grow in you daily. Everyone say, AMEN
